THE TURF AND THE "OUTLAW."

Mr. Bowers of the New York Tribune is a keen, though semi-superficial turf critic, who has been more influential than he naturally should have been in the Metropolitan racing field. His latest literary foray is against the "outlaws" of the Maryland field. Of course, Mr. Bowers did not go at those of St. Louis. One of the cardinal fads of New York turf critics is to overlook or slur Western racing of all grades. The fad has cost Metropolitan turf followers millions of dollars. Mr. Bowers treats his subject through the thoroughfare of a few facts, more general reflections, and more of the verbiage of abuse. He is a half master hand in the line of sharp and caustic personal reference. The "outlaws" are condemned on the ground that they are turf criminals and do not race to the line.

I should, above all things, like to discuss turf morality, turf law and turf outlawry—personal and general and as it is and should be with Mr. Bowers. He has injured the turf in many ways, is unjust local, narrow and critical from the angle of personality and its interest. The Commercial-Tribune of Cincinnati, contrasting my statement of the injustice of so called "outlawry" and Mr. Bowers' idea of the same turf corner considers Bowers to be "vitriolic." May be he is. Vitriol's useful, properly applied. So is opinion, opium, strychnine and a score of other remedies—or poisons. It's all in application. Mr. Bowers' inky vitriol has usually been applied to the wrong spots, so far as racing is concerned. This is offered as to his comments about the men and horses of his own field. He has toadied to and patted the rich owner on the back, "skinned" the poor owner, written in the light or shade of his idea and operations and been bitter, unfair and unjust everywhere and always. There are apparent reasons for all this. They need not be discussed, unless such discussions becomes necessary. I consider the "outlaw class," so called, an American turf necessity. The mere everydayism of sustenance, out of which outlawry grew has straightened out a knot in racingdom that American turf legislators in their carelessness overlooked.

The "outlaw" term is an abomination. The men, horses and jockeys used at these "outlaw" tracks are but earning their way with the tools or talents they possess. If they are not doing their honest best, they should be disciplined—to the limit. But class is class in men, animals and machines. The actor or tool of the $100 class cannot well be rated under the $1,500 standard of racing consistency. I have always estimated class, all around, as ability to do great things on call. Such ability can be commercially graded by degree from $100,000 to $100. Why not? The "outlaw" brigade relieves the general turf body. It need not be recognized. It should not, however, be branded as criminal and might well be given an unrecognized corner in turfdom. The English turf allow such owners and horses an unrecognized term of sustenance and refuge.

Mr. Bowers' idea of turf justice is based on Jockey Club law—past and present. This law may be—outside its large mutual admiration ugliness, good law for its own. The Grannan ruling—based on Jockey Club reason and influence—does not indicate that Jockey Club action is as intelligent as it might be. Other evidence in this same line can be furnished on call.

The Eastern or metropolitan turf field is concise and arrogant. The Western field is broad and less than generally protective. It usually, however, gives and takes. The Eastern body generally takes—and is apt to scream under action. Then, too, in its narrowness, it is apt to punish Western folks who may be, or seem to be "out of line." At the same time it regularly overlooks its own in-and-outism. This isn't the justice that a high class turf organization should dole out. More particulars in this line are on hand. A bill of them will be furnished on application.

There is slumber, mutual admiration, narrow interest, carelessness and mild immorality in Eastern turf action, Eastern turf legislation and Eastern turf newspaper comment.

Items under these heads will also be paraded on demand.

The American and every turf has its share of cheaters. So have the newspapers, clerical, grocery, legal, banking, dry goods and other mercantile industries of every, land as well as this great and miscellaneous nation. Sample cases can again be quoted if there is reason for quotation. Criticism's a cleanser in all lines if it's just criticism. Interested comment for a purpose is as bad or worse than the every day flubdubism of superficial comment from which the turf most suffers. The interested commentators are after something. The flubdubbers are simply blundering and bluffing. If Mr. Bowers doesn't care to discuss turf morality with me, the lists are open to others. The American turf is and has been ridden to death by interested creatures, mistaken creatures and their offshoots. Turfmen are, in a great measure, to blame for it all. They have not been protective enough and their lower grades have washed their dirty linen under the public nose. The smell thereof was naturally bad. Other industries have similar garbage receptacles. Fundamentally, though, there's many millions invested in the rearing of the American horse of all grades and betterment for the future's sake. There's too many scandal mongers about the active corners of horse culture and horse action. They are usually wrong. Many of the "mongers" are merchants. They should be put in their line. A suppressive movement would be the proper thing. If Mr. Bowers thinks that he is right and I am wrong I have some evidence, time and space to use for a discussion of it all.
